Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine if there were differences in the prevalence of musculoskeletal disorders between two groups of nurses working in different departments of a hospital. The study included 100 nurses from the intensive care unit (ICU) and 100 nurses from the medical-surgical department. A questionnaire was distributed to each nurse, asking about their work environment, job satisfaction, and musculoskeletal symptoms. The results showed that the prevalence of musculoskeletal disorders was higher among ICU nurses than among medical-surgical nurses. The most common symptoms were neck pain, shoulder pain, and back pain. The study also found that ICU nurses had lower job satisfaction and more stressful work environments compared to medical-surgical nurses.

There is no technical problem in the use of a single cell culture system for the study of human cells. Previous studies have shown that primary human cells can be grown in serum-free medium (1) and that the majority of the cells grown in serum-free medium are of the epithelial type (2). In addition, the growth of cells in serum-free medium has been demonstrated to be dependent on the type of cell (3). The use of a single cell culture system for the study of human cells is therefore a feasible approach.

1. RESEARCH DESIGN OF STUDY.
 Statistical data analysis was done at an independent Institute in 1987 by the authors' request. In 1988, in the authors' experiment, 1200 test tubes were collected at 10 locations, and the concentration of the bacteria. These results is change to two groups, those collections of positive tests.
